TRUSTEES' REPORT.

The Trustees herein present their thirty-ninth annual report.

This report together with the reports of the Lyceum and Library Committee present in detail the various items of interest in the management of the Institute during the past year.

The Librarian's report shows the circulation to have been 34,807 volumes against 30,815 volumes, for the year previous, an increase of about thirteen per cent, this being the largest circulation in the history of the Library; a most encouraging feature of this circulation being the increase in percentage of the more elevating classes of literature.

In the report of the chairman of the Lyceum and Library Committee the reference made to the work of the Lyceum Committee shows that the problem of lectures and entertainments which annually presents itself to this committee has not yet reached a satisfactory solution. The musical entertainments which have of late years found a place in the Lecture course were certainly not contemplated by Mr. Peabody, and are contrary to the time honored traditions of the Institute, and, without doubt, are a direct violation of the spirit and letter of the donor, and no interpretation that could be applied to his letter of gift would justify the substitution of such entertainments for the lectures which he intended should be provided. His aim was not to furnish trivial entertainments, but to encourage mental improvement and the dissemination of useful knowledge.

A course of lectures upon systematically arranged subjects such as are provided by the Lowell Institute of Boston, would be appreciated and patronized by the citizens of the town. The Trustees have no desire to encroach upon the privileges or prerogatives of committees whose duties and responsibilities are well defined, but embrace this opportunity to call attention to what seems to be a grave and serious departure from the object for which the Lecture Course was originally intended.

The Trustees received from the executors of the will of the late Mrs. Eliza Sutton, the bequest of fifteen thousand dollars, to which reference was made in the report of last year, and the same was invested in Boston municipal three and one-half per cent bonds.

During the year seventy thousand dollars of Town of Peabody of our per cent notes matured, which amount was re-invested in the same securities at a price yielding an income of 3 85-100 per cent upon the investment. And while referring to this matter, attention is called to the fact that many of the securities of the Institute mature during the next year, and must of necessity be re-invested at a lower rate of interest than is now obtained.

There seems to be an opinion in some quarters that the Institute is in a much better financial condition than a careful scrutiny of the Treasurer's Report will disclose.

The general expenses (to which the town has added taxes), are steadily increasing, while the income from invested funds is diminishing every year.

The Trustees, with a view of creating better facilities for a reading room, have had in contemplation during the year, plans for remodelling the interior of the building, and while the needs of the Institute in this direction were apparent to all, the changes proposed, would have required a large expenditure of money than the present condition of the finances would warrant.

The Trustees are pleased to record the faithful services of the employes. The success of an institution of this character can be very much advanced by the courtesy of those in attendance, and it is earnestly recommended that all assistance and encouragement possible be extended to those who avail themselves of the privileges of the Library.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

LYCEUM AND LIBRARY COMMITTEE.

TO THE TRUSTEES OF THE PEABODY INSTITUTE:

In behalf of the Lyceum and Library Committee, this report is respectfully submitted, together with the reports of the Treasurer and sub-committees of the Board, and also that of the Librarian.

The best test of an institution such as ours, is the influence which it exercises on the community, and the hold which it has on the popular heart. That the broad principles which inspired its foundation are being better understood and appreciated by all classes is beyond question. We are daily reminded not only of the munificence of Mr. Peabody, but of his wisdom in the disposition of his princely fortune for humanity's sake, while in the full enjoyment of his faculties. His native town was first in his memory, and the creation of this Institute would alone constitute an endearing monument to his name.

The manner in which the gift was accepted by his fellow citizens, and the judicious mode in which its provisions have been administered, clearly evince the nature in which it is regarded.

It has always been deemed an honor to serve the town in the administration of this trust, and the Institute officials have from the very beginning fairly represented the character and the culture of the community. The spirit of faction and discord and political strife has never entered their councils, and let us hope it never will enter.

The Peabody Institute is the most attractive spot in our midst. It helps to make our town a desirable place to live in. The stranger invariably seeks it out when he comes amongst us. He will find many structures more ornate and imposing, but rarely does he see a lecture hall so complete and harmonious, and above all a library so extensive and so well rounded in every department. In spite of some architectural defects, the library room presents a picture of care and good management in the arrangement and shelving of the books. No shabby or worn out volume finds a place there.

In estimating a popular library, it should be borne in mind that private libraries are multiplying, and that books and book buyers have increased enormously within the last decade, and that many local societies, especially temperance and benevolent organizations are making commendable efforts in collecting books for the immediate use of their members. Notwithstanding all this, it is gratifying to know that the circulation of the Library is steadily increasing, and in the direction of solid and thoughtful reading.

It might be safe to affirm that the use of the Library, and the store which it contains, have in many cases been the incentive in purchasing books, and in the desire to own them. It is essentially the poor man's library, and for him especially was it intended and designed by its beneficent founder.

As the number of books keeps increasing, so does the necessity for closer scrutiny and discrimination in the selection. It is in many cases more difficult to reject a book than to admit it to the shelves. The committee during the past year have exercised unusual care in the new accessions and have passed by many volumes which, though frequently attractive, were not deemed necessary to the wants of the Library. Many departments have been strengthened by valuable additions, and several important sets have been filled out by timely purchases. While the committee have not been guided by a narrow or bigoted sentiment, they have endeavored to carefully avoid a class of publications whose chief merit consists in their undisguised hostility to public morality and decency.

In this effort, as in all matters pertaining to the successful administration of the Library, they have received the valuable assistance of the Librarian. His large experience and ripe judgment eminently qualify him to direct and advise a young reader. To start right in reading is invaluable, and it is frequently more important for a boy or girl to be guided in what to avoid than in what to take up.

The Sutton Library is a store house of books so rare and valuable as to astonish the casual visitor. It is a lasting credit to those whose taste and judgment were exercised so satisfactorily. It is not a hap hazard collection of costly volumes which money could procure at any time, but it is a gathering together of books which none but a book lover and a scholar could so effectively accomplish.

The additions of new books during the year have been timely, and will repay a critical examination.

The Lyceum Committee have attended to the difficult task of providing instruction and entertainment to a satiated public, more eager to be amused than to be informed. The perplexing problem presents itself annually to this committee, whether to provide a class of entertainments which are sure to fill the hall nightly, or to present a series of scientific and purely instructive lectures regardless of popular favor. There are few lecturers of the present day who can draw a large audience on a purely abstract subject, and without the accessories of pictures and illustrations. The committee believe that the conditions which made the lecture so potent a factor in education and in the shaping of public opinion, have ceased to exist.

The reading room has its quota of steady patrons, the student and the scholar; the bright and eager reader of the last magazines, and the mechanic and the manufacturer, seeking for the latest discovery in the field of art and science.

The books relating to the application of electricity, the improvements in the method of tanning and dressing leathers, and all works on kindred subjects attract a special class of readers. The changes that have taken place in the modes of manufacture, and the increasing application of machinery in all branches of industry, necessitate a higher standard of intelligence amongst the manufacturers and wage earners, and in many departments, even in our own staple industry, a knowledge of chemistry is absolutely essential to success. Many special books on manufactures have been called for, and the committee as far as possible, have promptly complied with the requests.

It is pleasant to add that all the departments have worked in perfect accord, and all have endeavored to give a living force to the epigram of Mr. Peabody—"Education, a Debt due from Present to Future Generations".

THOMAS CARROLL,

Chairman Lyceum & Library Committee.

LIBRARY COMMITTEE.

TO THE LYCEUM AND LIBRARY COMMITTEE:

The report of the Library Committee for the year ending February 1st, 1891, is respectfully submitted:

The work of completing our files of important periodicals has been practically completed during the year, and we have purchased 123 volumes, 30 of which were bound and in good order, the remaining 93 volumes being unbound.

By this purchase we have completed our files of the Eclectic, Lippincott, New Englander, Magazine of American History, Cosmopolitan, Scientific American and Scientific American Supplement; our set of the North American Review is now complete with the exception of two of the early volumes which are very scarce, but which it is hoped we may ultimately secure.

The expense incurred in this purchase was considerable, but the Committee deemed it a judicious outlay, as it is doubtful if another opportunity will occur for securing these volumes, many of them having been for years out of print.

The reduced appropriation at the command of the Committee, together with the outlay for periodicals just referred to, which was virtually an extra expense, has made the strictest economy necessary in the purchase of books during the year. The Committee recognized this at the beginning of the year, and have used their best efforts in making purchases, to add only such works of recent publication as seemed essential, rejecting everything of doubtful value; yet, notwithstanding this, our appropriation was exhausted early in January, since which time no purchases have been made.

The circulation shows a gratifying gain over that of last year, and the figures in detail, included in the Librarian's report, are notable, especially by reason of the increased percentage of circulation in the classes of History and Science and Art, and the decrease in the percentage of the circulation of Fiction.

No changes in the conduct of the Reading Room have been made during the year, its patronage by the public has been fairly satisfactory, and all periodicals heretofore subscribed for have been continued upon its shelves, and the Cosmopolitan and the United Service have been added.

The Librarian notes an increased use of Poole's Index to Periodical Literature; this work, which is invaluable to any one having occasion to consult periodical publications, is at all times open to the public, and it is believed that a more general knowledge of this fact may possibly lead to its being consulted still more frequently.

In this connection, it will be wise for future Committees to carefully consider the Librarian's remarks as to the advisability of allowing the general circulation of bound volumes of those periodicals of which we own no duplicates, experience having shown the difficulty and expense of their replacement, and especially of the older volumes which grow scarcer year by year.

For the Committee,

L. P. OSBORN, Chairman.

LYCEUM COMMITTEE.

TO THE CHAIRMAN LYCEUM AND LIBRARY COMMITTEE:

The Lyceum Committee respectfully submits the following report, viz: List of lectures for the year 1890 and 1891:

For the Committee,

GEORGE C. FARRINGTON, Chairman.

EBEN DALE SUTTON REFERENCE LIBRARY COMMITTEE.

TO THE LYCEUM AND LIBRARY COMMITTEE:

The affairs of the E. D. Sutton Reference Library for the year ending Jan. 31, 1891, do not seem to require any extended comment.

The daily routine of its administration has been faithfully and carefully looked after by the Librarian, Miss Augusta F. Daniels, whose report is herewith submitted.

From this report it appears that the number of consultations of books in the Library has been 330, about 100 less than for the year before. The number of visitors has been 1,287, fifty-seven less than in the previous year.

The number of volumes placed upon the shelves has been seventy-four, one more than for the year 1889. 137 pamphlets and serials have also been received. Among the more valuable books purchased may be mentioned an elegant volume of artist Proof Engravings, published by the American Society of Wood Engravers.

Some change has been made in the financial arrangements for the Sutton Library during the past year. Hitherto the cost of the care of the room has been paid by the trustees from the general funds of the Peabody Institute. As the will of Mrs. Sutton left $5,000 for the maintenance of the Library room; the expense incurred for this purpose will in the future be borne by the income from this fund.

During the coming year the income from the further sum of $5,000, given by Mrs. Sutton for the purchase of books, will become available.

This cannot fail to further increase the usefulness of the Reference Library to our citizens, as well as to those visitors from abroad who make use of its privileges.

For the Committee,

J. H. OSGOOD, Chairman.

The following bound volumes have been added during the year ending Jan. 31, 1891.

LIBRARIAN'S REPORT.

TO THE LYCEUM AND LIBRARY COMMITTEE OF THE PEABODY INSTITUTE, PEABODY :

The Librarian of the Peabody Library respectfully submits his report for the year ending Feb. 1, 1891.

In addition to the regular business of the Library during the past year, the work of completing the copying of the old catalogue cards has practically ended.

Whatever else is to be done will be done in the regular Library hours.

In the last year's report, a statement was made that one of the works of Swedenborg, and the life of J. Howard Payne, were missing. The work of Swedenborg has been returned and it is presumable that Payne's life may be among the books of some other citizen's private library.

The entire library has been open through the regular hours excepting on holidays, for the first time in its history. No bad results have been perceived and probably the amount of solid reading was thereby increased.

Poole's Index to Periodical Literature has been much used by those desiring to look up matter for essays and other literary exercises, but it has often been found that the desired volume was in the hands of a borrower, which leads to the inquiry whether magazines, unless there are duplicates, should be circulated. Few libraries are accustomed to circulate them unless possessed of duplicates.
